What constitutes a basic Will

- This is a Will appointing appropriate Executors and, in the case of infant children, the appointment of Guardians. It would include dealing with any legacies, dealing with personal possessions, and then dealing with the residue of the estate including placing the same on simple trusts for your children until they obtain an appropriate age.

What information will we need from you:

- A summary all your assets so that you know what your Estate consists of and if you can consider how it should be distributed.

- Decide who will be your Executors. (The people you choose to deal with administering your affairs.)
- Decide who will be the guardians of your children if they are under 18 years of age.
- The details of anyone you wish to have any specific sums of money or goods.
- Choosing whom you want to be the main beneficiary or beneficiaries of your estate and what will happen to any beneficiary's share if they die before you.
- If you have a copy of an existing Will it is helpful to bring that with you
- We would need a copy of your full identity documents i.e. your Passport or Driving Licence and a recent household bill.

It is best to be precise, putting the full names, addresses and relationships of any beneficiary and giving a full description of any possessions to be given away. This avoids problems later and saves time.
